It makes the guh (hard g - /g/ sound) like in the garden or dog or the juh (soft g - /j/ sound) as in giraffe. In combination with the letter d, a grapheme is formed that sounds like /j/ (as in the ledger) g, is part of the gh digraph, which can produce the /g/sound as in the mind or the /l/ noise as in cough. G is part of the 'ng' digrapher, which can make the hard sound as in the finger, the soft sound as in alternation or the combined sound (the most common) as in singing. The difference in these pronounces is small, but important (to see why, try to pronounce singers as you would fingers). G is sometimes still as in gnat or gnawing. When G is followed by 'e' or 'i', it sometimes has the soft sound /j/ (as in gemstone or giraffe). The activities are organized from the simplest to the most difficult. Feel free, just a part away the activities to go, depending on the comfort level of the child! Letter Recognition Activity Sheet: Poem -- Circle the uppercase letter G, underline the lowercase g.
